From May 12 to June 10, Dirimart will be hosting Random Process, Ebru Uygun's second solo exhibition at the gallery, offering viewers a chance to become acquainted with her latest paintings.

Uygun's physical and mental vigor find expression in her work, in which ordinary canvases and paint take on entirely new dimensions. The artist is known for tearing apart each newly-created painting and then reconstructing it in striking fashion. Never confining her art to a single plane, Uygun constantly employs new techniques, allowing us to see how her artistic material interacts both with itself and with its exterior surfaces. As Uygun's art becomes increasingly monochrome in character, her canvases become a zone of transformation for her paint. Achieving the desired effect through the use of thick paint with the addition of chemicals, Uygun creates a unique oeuvre with her layers of monochrome canvas. Preferring to work simultaneously on several different artworks throughout their creation, Uygun has her own particular rhythm; her artworks reflect and become part of that rhythm, with each piece furnishing clues about the next.

Ebru Uygun was born in Istanbul in 1974. After graduating from Kingston University's Department of Art and Design in 1995, she received a BA from the Department of Illustration at Brighton University. Her art has featured in solo and group exhibitions at various galleries and museums, including Hot Spot Istanbul, Museum Haus Konstruktiv, Zurich (Solo and Group Show, 2 Catalogues, 2013); Geçmiş ve Gelecek (Past and Future), Istanbul Modern (2013); Lucid Dreaming, Green Art Gallery, Dubai (2011); and Trace, Mac Art Gallery, Istanbul (2006).
